

BECOME A CERTIFIED MEMBER OF COOK INLET REGIONAL CITIZENS ADVISORY COUNCIL

Our members help us achieve our goals of being a leader in improving our understanding and protection of Cook Inlet. Among our top priorities is making Cook Inlet data and information accessible and collecting and integrating biological and chemical environmental data in a sustained manner. Current projects include conducting a comprehensive risk assessment for oil facilities and infrastructure and ensuring detailed habitat data for all Cook Inlet area shorelines are available and integrated within the Incident Command during oil spill prevention planning and response. Our stakeholders and partners help us educate the public to enhance long-term stewardship of Cook Inlet.

As a certified member group represented on our Board of Directors, your organization will:

- Participate in elections to the Board of Directors.
- Have a greater understanding of the challenges facing Cook Inlet and how we can address them.
- Heightened visibility as a progressive organization concerned with helping protect the health of Cook Inlet.
- Greater public outreach through our website, annual reports, e-newsletter, media coverage, exhibits, and program work.
- Benefit from our thorough review of oil discharge prevention and contingency plans which are considered with our stakeholders' priorities in mind, as well as our knowledge and expertise.
- Be part of the solution to protecting Cook Inlet's valuable natural and cultural resources for future generations.
- Have access to real time updates during oil spill responses in your areas of concern.

About us

In the aftermath of the Exxon Valdez oil spill, Congress passed the comprehensive Oil Pollution Act (OPA) of 1990, which created two regional citizen advisory councils, Cook Inlet RCAC and Prince William Sound RCAC, to involve citizen participation in oil transportation and production. To ensure broad representation, Congress drew up the guidelines for selecting voting members. The CIRCAC Board of Directors is comprised of 13 members, each representing a specific interest or community. The cities of Anchorage, Kenai, Homer, Seldovia, and Kodiak each have a seat on the Council, as do the Kodiak Island Borough and the Kenai Peninsula Borough. Interest groups represented include Alaska Native organizations, tourism, environmental groups, recreational groups, commercial fishing groups, and aquaculture associations. Through OPA 90, we are mandated to conduct programs in biological and chemical monitoring, oil spill prevention and response, oil behavior, risk assessments, coastal habitats, physical oceanography, technical review and public outreach.

Stakeholders

Certified Participating Groups

As prescribed by OPA 90, certified stakeholder groups are those which have chosen to support our efforts on behalf of their organization, are open to offering members to serve on the Council, and want to be in a position of being represented, kept informed, and consulted. On a three-year, rotating basis, these groups nominate and elect a representative and an alternate.

We encourage interested groups to participate in the leadership of the Council through the one-time certification process.
